Christmas Trees.

The children of the Mission school in Fowler's yard were, last evening, treated to a Christmas-tree festival, while they in turn gave a very pleasing entertainment in the form of songs, recitations and dialogues, to the patrons and friends of the school. The school, as represented on the occasion, numbers some forty boys and girls, most of whom are Swedes and Norwegians.

The singing of the little people was very fine, and indeed all the exercises were of a character which would do credit to any New England Sunday school. The programme was under the direction of Miss Johnson, superintendent of the Mission. Miss A. Fillebrown presided at the piano, giving excellent accompaniments to the vocal efforts of the juveniles. The Society of Christian Endeavor of Fort-street Church, in the lecture room of which the entertainment was held, had provided the means for loading the tree, and the members of the society had rendered valuable assistance in making and in carrying out the arrangements. The musical and literary part of the programme being completed, the horn of Santa Claus was heard tooting in the distance, and in he rushed in hot haste, with a profusion of gray beard and duly costumed in a snow-flaked overcoat. The distribution of presents then followed, and the reporter not being a scholar, did not expect a gift, but hied away to the Chinese Y. M. C. A., where Mr. F. W. Damon and his co-workers were found surrounded by a large audience of Chinese and foreigners in the main hall of the building. A magnificent Christmas tree covered the platform, reaching up to the ceiling. Two large groups of little Mongolians were seated, the boys on one side and the girls on the other, in front. These were the children of the various Chinese Mission schools. A programme of hymns, scripture, recitations and dialogues, alternately in English and Chinese, was gone through in a most interesting and effective manner, to the great delight of the spectators. The distribution of gifts, in which none of the little ones was forgotten, commenced, when the reporter, as before, not being a scholar nor even a Chinaman, retired from the joyous scene, with many alohas for the success of all philanthropic efforts towards the enlightenment of Chinese, Swedes, Norwegians and all and sundry nationalities who come to our shores to learn the great truths constituting the basis of advanced civilization.

A Bad Fall.

An Englishman named Thomas Trainor, while walking along Hotel street, below Smith street, about eight o'clock last evening, fell into the cellar of the building called Buffum's Hall, that existed there before the fire. The fall was from ten to fifteen feet on the rocky debris, and the man was picked up in a stunned condition. He was taken to his lodging in a house on Smith street, and Dr. Tucker was called and dressed a severe scalp wound in his head. Our reporter found Trainor in bed near ten o'clock, complaining, as he sat up to give his name, of severe pain in the back. He was fireman on an inter-island steamer till three weeks ago, and the past two days had been working for Mr. Lucas. The cellar into which he fell is never lighted at night, and Trainor thought at different times that somebody would take a tumble into it sometime. He thinks he would have been just as liable to fall in without the "couple of drinks" he had taken.
